Food for Thought

Bring your own food and thoughts

Food for Thought is an informal brown bag seminar where PhD students and early-career researchers can talk research over lunch.

Bring whatever's on your mind: a work-in-progress presentation, a research design you're stuck on, or a paper you found exciting (and don't forget to bring your lunch).

There are no requirements and no pressure, just an open, friendly space to share ideas, get feedback, and learn from each other outside formal settings.

We wrap up with coffee, and senior colleagues are always welcome to stop by before heading back to the afternoon's work.
